As a designer, I want my work to carry that same message of strength and possibility. My collections will not only tell my story but also connect with others who are striving to break free from expectations and chase their dreams. I want every piece I create to make the wearer feel confident and unapologetically themselves.

At the same time, I want my designs to be wearable in real life. My vision is to create garments that balance professionalism and everyday comfort. Some pieces will be polished, formal and tailored, perfect for the office or boardroom, while others, like tailored pants or bottoms, will work casually for day-to-day wear.

Ultimately, I want to be the kind of designer who blends storytelling with garments which can actually be worn in real life day to day and not only on runway. I want my collection to be a mix of formal wear like coats, multipurpose pants and dresses.

THANK YOU
